BOARDING HOUSE TRIEF NIPPED IN THE HORRIGEN ACCIDENT. BOY RUE OVER BY Sun. - A genteel and rather dandyish look- | Cans. - The chapter of terrible accidents is ing young man, who gives his name as very long, and it seems likely to have no George Smith, applied for board and room, four or five days ago, at the boarding people out of harm's way. The boys have house of the Misses Canvin, on Bank street, stating by way of recommendation, perhaps, that he was a compositor on the Plain Dealer. He was admitted, and by the confidence and good will of all parties frightful mutilation and death has to be in the establishment. Yesterday after- recorded. noon, sometime after dinner had been served and the boarders, all save Mr. Smith, had left the house, Miss Canvin missed her guitar, a very elegant instrument worth $40. She obeyed the impulse of the mement, and hurried down to inform Mr. O. A. Putnam, a boarder in her house, who is employed at Davis, Peixotto & Co's clothing store. Suspecting that if Smith had stolen it he would naturally leave the city as soon as possible, he dispatched the lady to the depot to inform the police of the matter and if they saw Smith to nab him. Mr. Putnam went up to his room on Bank street and found that two suits of his clothes and various other articles of his wardrobe had been stolen from his room. He immediately went to the depot and, with two police officers, began searching the Lake Shore train. As they were stepping into the rear car, they saw the guitar lying on a seat, and Mr. Clark Warren had just arrested Smith. It was ascertained that an hour or two previous he had sold, for $30, the suits of clothes to a Jew keeping a second hand clothing store under the hill. One was a new suit, worth $40, and the other, $35. Mules .- Another drove of mules, two or bree hundred in number, came in from Pittsburgh yesterday afternoon, and were driven up Superior street, and thence, we suppose, to the camp-stables. Some were very sleek, shiny-coated fellows, but most f them seemed valuable only as specimens for osteological study. They were of the pagoda style of architecture. We would wish to have been cast in other mold, if military despotism, or any other man, had compelled us to ride one of those brutes, bareback, forty miles or so at one stretch.

One of these mules, a large, raw-boned secimen, took the pavement near the Plain Dealer office, and would not leave it until he reached the American House. His eyes | played with sweet effect "The Last Rose of were sunken, his spine loomed up like a coarse-toothed cross-cut saw, and he was wofully dilapidated. We understand that this mule ran up to Ontario street, where he was treated handemely and with characteristic generosity by the grocers and market men there—each of them being anxious to out do every other in furnishing the luxuries of the season, and bringing to the common trough blackberries and huckleberries by the quart and will open at the Academy of Music, on the peck, and piling up the out-trough with these free-will offerings which they bestowed upon this jackass. He was revelling about the Union depot, with Tom, Dick and Harry, and scattering his money as only a half-insane man could. Mr. Clark Warren had him arrested, and found about $350 on his person. It was thought best to lock him up in jail a few days until he should come to himself, and send for his friends to come and take care of him.

It seems that he did not succeed in doing himself much damage with the tin. A few scratches across his wind-pipe are all the marks of violence now visible. He is coming out of his whisky delirium.

As Explanation,-The re-opening of the "Varieties" is not the result of any lettingup or compromise on the part of the city government, as might, perhaps, be infered from the somewhat careless phraseology fown with wonderful accuracy. It is just of our notice thereof in our last issue, but it results from the fact that that government has no right to keep closed places of amusement whose entertainments are made free. The city authorities have secured the pledge of the proprietor of the "Varieties," that the proceedings there will be conduct; ed in decenop and in order, and they will see to it that nothing objectionable is pre. sented there in future. That is all they can do in the matter, and that is perhaps sufficient.

BURIED ALIVE .- We were informed yester day by a reliable gentleman connected with the Mahoning mail train, of an secident which befel four men and a dog in a coal mine, at or near Hubbard, Trumbull county, last week Thursday.
